“ I love the time I spent with Aunt Annie growing up. All through the years, she was there to guide me and be another role model. It wasn't until my teenage years when she would tell the stories back to me where I fully appreciated our time together. When I visited her downtown, she would tell me stories of dad or myself, and always had a warm, loving personality. My favorite two short stories were when she babysat me once, and when my father Syl said to her that we were going on a family road trip in the RV. Her spirits were high, the horizon was our destination..., and then we went to Sylvan beach. She wouldn't let my father forget about that trip.

Kristen and I had the opportunity to visit her, Laura, and Ricky when she lived in Ohio within the past few years. Even if it went by too quickly, it was still great and wonderful to see her and the family. We would talk about family back in Syracuse, family in Columbus, and we would all be laughing and enjoying ourselves. I miss her smile, her laugh, and her wit. Love and blessings to you Aunt Annie, and Laura and family. ~T

“ When Aunt Annie lived in Syracuse, in the 1990s and 2000s, I always made it a point to visit her whenever I was in town. I always took my Dad (her brother, Angelo) and we usually started with lunch at a Chinese restaurant and then finished the day with whatever errands, etc. Aunt Annie wanted to do.

On one of these visits, Aunt Annie asked me to take her to the bank to cash a check.

You can't deposit it in your checking account?

Whatever, I went along with it...

Aunt Annie played navigator and lead me to the bank.

Genius me decided to go to the drive through (big mistake).

The conversation went something like this:

Rod: My aunt would like to cash this check.

Bank: Does she have an account here?

Rod: Aunt Annie, do you have an account here?

Aunt Annie: I don't but Dr. Dederio does.

Rod: Huh? Who is that?

Aunt Annie: The guy who pays me.

Rod: So why aren't we at your bank?

Aunt Annie: I've always cashed his checks here.

Rod (to the bank teller): Can you cash this check?

Bank: No, you aunt doesn't have an account here.

Aunt Annie (yelling across me to the bank teller): Dr. Dederio has an account here.

Bank: Huh?

Aunt Annie (still yelling across me): I always cash his checks here.

Rod: Aunt Annie, are you sure we are at the right bank (Rod is having his doubts)?

Aunt Annie: Yes, I come here all the time.

Rod (to the teller): If the doctor has an account here, wouldn't my aunt be able to cash this check with some ID?

Bank: Sir, this check is from another bank.

Rod (laughing hysterically): Aunt Annie, we are at the wrong bank.

Aunt Annie: Are you sure, honey?

Rod: Yes (shows her the check)

Aunt Annie: OK, honey.

That pretty much sums up my visits with Aunt Annie.

Always a laugh or two or three...

I will miss her so much.

“ *I didn't get to see my Aunt Annie very much because we lived in Illinois away from most of the family, but when I did get to spend time with her it was so special. She had great smile and an even better laugh. She made me feel happy and loved. The first memory I had of her is when we stopped in Ohio on our way to Syracuse one year. She wanted to see Papa Joe again and she arranged with Dad to pick her up. She was bubbly and talkative and my normally more quiet Dad delighted in having her with us. He so enjoyed being with his siblings and all the family. All of us were glad she came along. I got to see her a couple of more times in my life and I enjoyed every moment. I know my Mom was thrilled to have visited her a couple of years ago. My Mom remembers her as a very young girl and also commented on her always upbeat attitude and infectious smile no matter what life sent her. I know she is now in heaven having a reunion with Dad and her other siblings. Love to you Aunt Annie. Blessings to Laura and the rest of her family. Love,

“ My funniest memory of Aunt Annie was when dad (Sylvester) and I went to visit her one summer on one of our cross country trips to visit family. She had some small birds, I think they were parakeets. They were in a cage in the room we were sleeping in. Part way through the night the birds started dive bombing dad and I! Come to find out that when Annie was making the bed she left the bottom of the bird cage under the covers and the birds were free to fly around the room! Dad didn't let her live that one down! Not only was he being attacked by birds but he also slept on a piece of the bird cage! God bless you Aunt Annie. You always made me smile and laugh!

“ I will always remember my Aunt Annie's raucous laughter, the old cadillac, and a cigarette in her mouth! Of course that was decades ago, and after my mother and father's divorce (George and Rose Alessio,) living in California made it hard to see her as I grew up. I regret not knowing my mother's side of the family like I knew my late father's. I picture Aunt Anna dancing in Heaven with momma, and I CAN'T WAIT TO BE WITH THEM AGAIN!!! Many Blessings and my DEEPEST sympathy to the family.

Love,
Marie
